TRAINING SCHOOLS INSURANCE

As a training organisation, you can be held legally liable for errors made or injury caused during the activities of the establishment, for example lessons etc. You can also be considered responsible for case study claims which have been caused by students (if the claim is against the school itself and not the student personally.)

Malpractice policies normally allow practitioners to teach the therapies they are qualified in, but purely as an individual tutor. If you intend to issue certificates to practitioner standard, you will generally speaking require a training school policy as well as your existing practice cover. Balens training school policy is specially designed to meet this need so that you and your students are protected.
